THE PASSION PLAY.

The Performance Beautiful and Impressive and Devoid of Objectionable Features.

SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.

New York, March 7.—[illegible] there could be any profanity or sacrilege in an exhibition which received the [illegible] of [illegible] Catholic prelate in San Francisco, Archbishop Alemany, and if such content lived [illegible] priests as the Jesuit fathers there [illegible] on both checks [illegible] of their church the writer was [illegible] at the rehearsal at least as far as the performance went it was very [illegible]

[illegible]

The drop curtain was chiefly [illegible] the angels who sang to the shepherds from beneath the stage, which was evidently meant to represent the song "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace and good will to men." On the left corner was a cross from which hung a bell in the act of striking an hour. When the curtain rose the stage was filled with a crowd of performers in oriental costume, priests, Levites, Mr. [illegible] as the high priest in the center, assembled in the court of the temple. The architecture was magnificent. When the play was stopped by the police Morse was compelled by the audience to come forward. He made a short earnest speech. An old gentleman, Judge [illegible], from the gallery began to bear testimony of having three times

WITNESSED THE SAME [illegible]

At San Francisco, where there had been nothing of a profane or sacrilegious character. The audience called him down to the stage, where he completed what he had begun in the gallery. "I have now seen and talked with Morse [illegible] three or four times. He is a passionate, enthusiastic man, totally indifferent to money. 'I have spent $1[illegible],000 on this thing,' he said, 'and every cent of it was cash, and I owe to man a dollar. I have designed, drawn, and worked night and day in either doing or directing everything about the play. I have studied deeply and traveled long and far, grudging no expense to enable me to reproduce everything in fac simile so far as it was humanly possible. Yet after all this I am treated by fanatics as a criminal.'" Morse is deeply disgusted with the treatment he has received and expresses regret that he ever came to New York.

POLITICAL.

Local Elections in New York.

New York, 7.—The Post says: The November tidal wave has not wholly spent its force, judging from the results of some local elections in this state. Yesterday, in Utica the democratic candidate for mayor was elected by an increased vote. The Oneida county board of supervisors is democratic by four majority. Last year it was republican by two majority. In Rochester the democrats elect their mayor and hold their own in the board of supervisors. In Erie county the democrats have gained five towns and the republicans three, a net gain of two for the former. In Columbia county 14 democratic and two republican supervisors are chosen; last year there were eleven democrats and eleven republicans. Upon the whole the results of these local elections added to many other signs show that the republican party will scarcely recover its lost ground by a reaction, in which some of its leaders have been trusting.

Report of Lieut. Harber's Search for the Missing People of the Jeannette.

Congressman Belford, of Colorado, Fined $100 for Contempt of Court.

The Extradition of Sheridan Considered Improbable.

SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.

Washington, March 7.—[illegible] Lieutenant Harber [illegible] with native boats. [illegible] the different parties [illegible] they were frequently compelled to walk and drag the boats for miles. On the [illegible] of August, [illegible] they reached Matra, visited the graves of Lieutenant Commander DeLong and companions, and put four heavy bolts through the standard and arms of the cross in accordance with a request of Engineer Melville. Thence the search was continued to the northward and on the 1st they reached the spot where Lieutenant Commander [illegible]

[illegible]

Search was made to see if anything remained hidden under the snow. Nothing, in consequence, however, was found. Returning, the party reached Bulun the 10th of September. Here the Jeannette party was placed in charge of Ensign Hunt and search was continued by Lieutenant Harber and Mr. Schuetze on sledges. Lieutenant Harber then gives an account of the [illegible] visited and distances traveled [illegible] to Bulun [illegible] of November [illegible] not the slightest trace of [illegible] his party [illegible] has been seen by any of the natives. It is probable that he [illegible] with every native of the [illegible] with those who were [illegible]. The remainder of the report relates to arrangements for the removal of the remains of Lieutenant Commander DeLong and party and consists [illegible] transmitted by telegraph. Accompanying the report is a chart showing the route of the men in search.

Concerning Sheridan's Extradition.

Washington, March 7.—The impression prevails here that Sheridan will not be extradited, but that the United States courts to which he will appeal in case the decision of the commissioner of New York is against him will not recognize political offenses as a crime under the treaty. It appears that the recent decisions of our courts of extradition were not merely a matter between the governments, but at least in this country the person may for himself call for aid of the courts if the treaty is violated. In cases which have arisen, prisoners having been surrendered by England to this country for trial secured their release by showing that they were being prosecuted for an offense other than that for which they had been surrendered and which was an offense [illegible] the treaty. The state department has received

[illegible] INFORMATION

On this subject than is contained in the newspapers. The general impression is that Secretary Frelinghuysen is inclined to advise the president that extradition papers should issue, but nothing that has yet transpired can probably justify such an impression. The issuance of the warrant which has been [illegible], was merely formal and done simply to permit the arraignment of Sheridan before the [illegible] judge, a condition precedent to a [illegible] of record to test whether there was sufficient evidence to justify his being held to answer for the charge made against him. If the evidence presented is such as to satisfy the court that he be held, then the state department may be called upon to decide whether extradition papers shall be issued or not.

The Malagasy Ambassador.

Washington, March 7.—The Malagasy ambassadors, [illegible] formally presented to-day [illegible] the state department and had an informal interview with the secretary of state in regard to the treaty, a statement of which had been published. He said that the commissioners would consider and ratify it during their stay here. It was made in 1880, and ratified by the senate in 1881. The only [illegible] formally was the exchange of ratifications by representatives of the respective governments, which will take place in Madagascar.

To-morrow the ambassadors will go down the river to Mount Vernon. At his request, Secretary Chandler placed the United States steamship Despatch, now lying at the navy yard, at Secretary Frelinghuysen's disposal and detailed the Marine band to accompany the excursion party. Invitations were extended to members of the cabinet and their families, the diplomatic corps and others. The party will number about seventy five.

The El Sobriante Case.

Washington, March 7.—Secretary Teller to-day heard the arguments for the reopening of the El Sobriante case. Messrs. Carpenter and [illegible] spoke in favor of reopening. At the time the case was decided postponement of final action was on the ground that certain evidence had not reached here in time. No allusion to any evidence was made to-day, however, counsel arguing on its merits. Only one side was heard, the secretary telling the counsel for the settlers that if it were necessary to hear their side he would notify them. They look upon this as an indication that he does not need any further argument to convince him that the case should not be reopened.

Lecture on Russia.

Washington, March 7.—Dr. John Hill lectured last night on Russia, which he visited last summer. He presented a hopeful picture of the country. Schools have become more plentiful, trade is becoming a factor, the sense of freedom among the people is growing and the power to read creates a demand for books. Russia looks out upon Europe through the eye of St. Petersburg. Europe also looks in through [illegible] Siberia, about which we have heard such terrible stories, is the best and richest province in Russia. Several exiles have become rich and prosperous, something akin to the [illegible] of Australia first used by England for convicts.

Wiggins and his Storms.

It is a curious fact that notwithstanding Wiggins' utter collapse last month as a weather prophet, there is a wide-spread interest and uneasiness [illegible] in the telegraphic dispatches, especially [illegible] reaching here from Canada and parts of New England respecting his predicted hurricane of the [illegible]. At the signal office here it is expected that the [illegible]th and 10th will be beautiful days, and Wiggins is [illegible] the coast last month.

THE STAR ROUTE TRIAL.

Hon. James Belford, of Colorado, Called to the Stand by the Defense.

SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.

Washington, March 7.—[illegible]

Witness said he impressed upon Brady the rapid growth and needs of the state. [illegible] the San Juan country and Leadville, which were [illegible] several years ago. When last there he found it impossible to walk [illegible]

Merrick objected because of the time referred to, but the court held it proper evidence [illegible] to show that Brady [illegible]

Merrick: I object.

The court promptly sustained the objection.

Merrick reminded the court that the [illegible] had been stricken out of the record.

[illegible] Ingersoll called the attention of the court to what Rerdell said about the [illegible] of checks [illegible] that was equally material. It [illegible] that he heard the conversation between Dorsey and Brady at which Belford was present, would they not be allowed to show that Belford was not present, and that the story was false? [illegible] If they could show that was false would it not tend to prove his statements about other checks false? It was certainly material. He wanted to show that no such check had been received by Belford and that Rerdell had sworn falsely when he said it. [illegible]

The court said: Nothing has been served upon the defense to produce the stub books. They refused, which they had a perfect right to do, and the government is compelled to make out its case by secondary evidence. They were not obliged to do it if the book did not exist, but now the court had a right to assume from the evidence that it did exist, and was in the hands of the defense. If they want to contradict Rerdell it must be done in some essential manner. In the opinion of the court what he had said in regard to Belford had no relation to any of the defendants. It did not necessarily cast an imputation on Belford's character because the stubs showed that the check had been drawn to the order of Belford. It did not show relation to any [illegible] charged in this indictment.

A [illegible] was introduced [illegible] investigation of [illegible] charges that members of the house [illegible]

The Tacoma's Compasses Free of Defect.

San Francisco, March 7.—In reference to the loss of the Tacoma it is expected that a decision will be rendered in a few days. A statement has been published by John I. Hand, compass adjuster at Philadelphia, who adjusted the instruments of the lost [illegible], which states that he arranged five compasses belonging to that vessel and that they were free of defect. In support of this statement he mentions that the Tacoma went safely around to [illegible], making one of the quickest runs on record, and [illegible] in the straits of Magellan.

The new steamer San Pedro belonging to the Pacific Improvement company arrived this afternoon, [illegible] days from Philadelphia and some 10 days over the usual running time of the companion ship Tacoma. The track of the new transcontinental line, the Atlantic & Pacific railroad, is now laid 212 miles east of Mojave station on the Southern Pacific. Wouldn't Take Chances.

The predicted storm has had no effect along the water front and no precautions against damage to shipping were taken, although it is stated that several captains have delayed departure rather than take any chances on it.

Supposed Murderer Arrested.

L. [illegible] Hick, a notorious three card monte dealer, who is wanted in Delaware county, O., for the murder of [illegible] Lohman in 1877, was brought from Los Angeles this evening in obedience to a writ of habeas corpus issued from the superior court of this city. When interviewed by a reporter he said the officers had not succeeded in establishing his identity and that he would make a statement of his antecedents in the court to-morrow.

Seed Wheat for Oregon.

San Francisco, March 7.—A prominent grain firm of this city yesterday shipped 330 tons of wheat to Portland, which is to be used as seed in Linn county. Another shipment will probably be made on the steamer sailing Saturday, for sowing in the Willamette valley.

Probably Drowned.

A small whitehall boat was seen floating out on the tide, through the heads, and on being brought to shore by the keeper of the light house, was identified as belonging to two men, who on the morning of that day had gone fishing. A small rock, which they tied to a rope for the purpose of using as an anchor, was also found in the boat, giving ground for the theory that they were drowned.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

Lively Land Jumping.

Seattle, March 7.—Much excitement has prevailed here in certain circles during the past two days over attempts to seize upon valuable tide flat lands at the head of the bay. These flats are claimed by the railroad people, under an act of the territorial legislature. They however were in actual possession of but a small portion of them. Night before last a number of men, aided by two pile drivers, went out under cover of darkness and seized upon several choice blocks, driving piles around them and placing [illegible] there. Injunctions were got out on behalf of the railroad company yesterday morning, and then it was supposed the matter would rest until tried in the courts. On the contrary, though, a force of men for the company with two steam boats quietly went to work last night at 12 o'clock and pulled out most of the piles driven the night before. In doing so they were resisted as far as possible by the jumpers and some shooting was done, though without personal injury to anyone. Injunctions against the company and its employes were granted at once. The tide flats of the bay have an area of over 200 acres, and are worth at present values a million dollars.

Seattle's Scarcity of Farm Produce.

Seattle, March 7.—Between the large exports of last fall and the greatly increased number of consumers at home, farm produce here has been pretty thoroughly cleaned out. Meats never were so high before. [illegible] pork both retailing at 20 cents a pound. [illegible] eggs have been very high and for the first time in five years have been imported from California. Our farmers sold their oats in the fall at $[illegible] to $[illegible], and now in some cases are buying them back for $[illegible] to $40. [illegible]

Seattle's Boom.

Seattle, March 7.—Real estate, under the impetus of [illegible] increasing business, is [illegible] rapidly [illegible] of the town is in a booming condition, putting everything of the kind [illegible] in the territory. Seizure of an English Ship.

Panama, Feb. 24.—The seizure by order of the Dictator [illegible] of the English ship Mysterious Star at San Lorenzo created considerable sensation. Capt. Jenkins of the Star has arrived here in search of assistance. His vessel was chartered to carry [illegible] from Ecuadorian ports to Europe. While at anchor off San Lorenzo he was arrested [illegible] charged with aiding the revolutionists and his vessel and nautical implements seized. Her sails were stripped off and the captain then allowed to return. Finding his vessel in a distressed condition he determined to come to Panama and seek assistance from a man of war harboring here.

Railroad Progress.

Panama, Feb. 24.—The arrival of General Butterfield and Geo. Crocker in Guatemala City has marked a new era of work and effort in the construction of the Guatemala Central railroad. Col. [illegible] Fitzsimmons, chief engineer, has a large force at work on the extension from Escuintla to Capland, and orders have been given to add 1,500 laborers to the number already employed. Six ships are on the way or arrived, with materials for work on the Central railroad of Salvador, for which Butterfield holds a concession, and it will shortly be commenced. General Saviz has announced his intention to push to an early completion the different enterprises he has undertaken in Central America. In company with Brocker Hall, the American minister to Central America, and Louis Farrel, of San Francisco, Butterfield will visit San Salvador during the present month, and make final arrangements for the prosecution of a new railroad in the republic.

The Star and Herald says: Our Guatemala correspondent hints that Butterfield has not had everything his own way in Guatemala. The president or managing director of the old company refuses to comply with certain agreements solemnly entered into. All claims of the old company have been settled, but the president or whatever he is, Schlainger by name, insists on remaining as a perpetual figurehead to the new company. He declines to resign as he agreed to do and so perforce, Butterfield and associates must remain with such an encumbrance as this to hamper and vex them.

THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

It is announced that the [illegible] pointed by the president [illegible] ods of carrying [illegible] have all accepted [illegible] their duties. One of the [illegible] democrat [illegible] judgment has been [illegible] selecting them. At the head of the commission is Dorman B. Eaton of New York, who has devoted more time and thought to the consideration of reforming the civil service than any other man in America. His writings for years past have shown a comprehension of the subject at once thorough and wise. More than any other advocate of this reform he has shown good judgment in separating the practical from the visionary plans which have been proposed. His book on the civil service of Great Britain which explains the workings of the reformed system there, shows how the reform was brought about, what it has [illegible] and what it teaches in relation to the reform of the civil service [illegible] the most valuable contribution to the literature of the subject ever presented. Were it read as generally as [illegible] people would see at once what [illegible] and how to do it, and would [illegible] irrelevant objections to the proposed reform which spoils-men use to prop up a vicious and utterly indefensible system. Mr. Eaton was active in securing the passage of the present law, and is the fittest man in the country to superintend the methods of carrying it into operation. It is gratifying to know that the undertaking will be under the direction of a man who not only will not try to thwart its purpose, but who firmly believes that the work is alike necessary and practicable, and this will mean a great deal.

The second republican member of the commission is John M. Gregory of Illinois, who has a good record as an executive officer and is regarded as a trustworthy man. The democratic member is Leroy D. Thoman of Ohio, who owes his appointment to Senator Pendleton, the father of the bill. He is now in Washington, in anticipation of the meeting of the commission, which will undertake at once the work which the law entrusts to its hands. Mr. Thoman is reported to be ambitious to make a record in this important work which will do honor to himself and render the country a service. Upon the manner in which the commission proceeds depends the success of the law. The commission is to control the examinations under the act, make investigations into the state of the service and recommendations for its improvement, and to report to the president on all matters touching the enforcement and effect of the rules and regulations for carrying out its provisions. The scope of its powers is extensive, and its duties and responsibilities are exacting. But the work is in the hands of men who believe that the country ought to have and can have a civil service divorced from the evils of partisanship and spoils-seeking; and though we may not get at once the whole measure of reform which is desired, a foundation may be laid upon which the necessary structure can be erected. The country is ready for the rule that positions of honor, trust and emolument in its service shall no longer be used by political bosses as their own private property, for payment of their political debts or building up their personal fortunes.

PATENTS

In England there is agitation for reform of the patent laws. The cost of taking out a patent there is very heavy. Here a patent for 17 years may be had for $35 while in England the total cost of a patent for 14 years is $675. One result, of course, is that useless or trifling things are not patented in England as much as in the United States. It is true that many American patents cost more than $35, a further expense having to be incurred in the event of the application to register being opposed. It is true, also, that in England what are practically a number of different inventions are often included in one specification, and protected by one patent, while with us every invention must be covered by a distinct patent, so that a single patent in England is oftentimes equivalent to three in the United States. But, after all allowances are made, the fact remains that it costs a good deal more, on the average, to obtain a patent in England than in the United States. The patent system is a just one, since every person ought to be permitted to enjoy the fruits of his or her inventive genius, provided the public are permitted to participate in that enjoyment on terms that are reasonable, but there are gross abuses of the system that never ought to be tolerated. What for instance, could be more absurd than to allow a patent on the use of barbed wire for fences or more unjust than to protect a monopoly in the manufacture of it? It is no invention for fences armed with barbs of various kinds have been used ever since agriculture began. It is these abuses of the patent laws that make sentiment against them.

Compulsory education has as yet been tried only on a limited scale, yet in so far as it has been tried the results show it to be a very effective means of reducing juvenile crime. The grand duchy of Baden, by a vigorous enforcement of such a law for seven years according to carefully prepared statistics, reduced crime in that duchy more than one-half and pauperism fully one-fourth. In New York the law is not rigidly enforced, but the board of education employs twenty truancy agents to look after the children. Their labors, imperfect though they must be, with 150,000 children to look after, have had a most remarkable effect in reducing juvenile crime in that city. For the five years immediately preceding the enactment of the compulsory education law, the average number of arrests per annum, of juvenile offenders, was 1221; for the subsequent five years the average number of arrests was but 968, and last year it was but 717, although the population had, of course greatly increased. A single agent placed over one thousand Italian truants in schools and the decrease in crime has been more than one third. It is claimed that if the law were strictly enforced crime could be reduced ninety per cent and the recruiting dens for young criminals closed up. This is certainly fighting crime at the right end of the line, and the more of it we have the better. Give us more compulsory education, and fewer jails and reformatory institutions.

A civil service bill is now pending in the Pennsylvania legislature embodying the [illegible] ary of the Pendleton bill [illegible] characterized as a [illegible]. Speaking of it the Pittsburg Gazette says: It is doubtful whether there are more than fifty officials [illegible] state to which the bill will apply, and yet there are to be two commissioners at a salary of $2,500 each, an examiner at a salary of $3,000, together with a secretary, stenographer and messenger. The state is to pay all traveling expenses of the commission while on duty. There is a want of adaptation [illegible] to the end in view which ought to be remedied. Let the bill be pruned down so as to fit the exact requirements of the civil service of the state. An annual expenditure of $18,000 or $20,000 seems out of proportion to the [illegible] which the commission will [illegible] to perform.

The government has closed its case against the star route thieves. It has presented enough to convince the country but there is no telling what a Washington jury may do.

EVOLUTION OF THE CAMP MEETING

Another [illegible] camp meeting was [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] under the auspices of the Methodist [illegible] "Ocean Grove Camp-Meeting Association." The camp-meeting is [illegible] new [illegible] says an [illegible] It is the fruit of a charter [illegible] the [illegible] rights and franchises of the same nature [illegible] that which [illegible] railway or banking associations. Of course the corporators are [illegible] ministers and [illegible] Methodist Episcopal church. A charter before the writer [illegible] states [illegible] the maintenance of a seaside resort founded upon Christian principles and affording religious privileges as well as healthful recreation. Provision is made for the transfer and redemption of stock for voting by shares and by proxy as is usual in other money making companies. It defines the number of directors, one third of whom shall be ministers, and one other third shall be ministers and members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Its president shall be a regularly ordained minister of the Methodist Episcopal church, having control of the conventions, assemblies and other meetings that may from time be held on the premises, and the secretary and treasurer must give bonds for the faithful performance of of their duty—in one instance as high as thirty thousand dollars. Is not this an anomaly? The camp-meeting feature if indeed it is prominent enough to be a feature, is merely incidental to the main object, viz: the establishment of a seaside resort. To do this land must be purchased, stock must be sold to pay for it and the pastor president is to be the executive officer through whom these conveyances are to be made and by whom all the real estate transactions are to be ratified. The entire time out of the three hundred working days of the year that is to be set aside for camp meeting service is ten days or a fortnight, and the remainder is occupied with the secular business of the concern. These associations have taken up coast lands, particularly on the New Jersey coast, some of which were comparatively worthless and made them into fruitful towns with prosperous and happy peoples." They are to be credited also with the testimony they have borne to sobriety and good morals, by preventing the sale of intoxicating liquors within their boundaries.

"It is a question," says Dr. Parrish, "whether the cause of christianity has been actually benefitted by their policy. It is a question whether the samp'e preaching, of the present camp meeting style is as effectual as were the direct and incisive appeals of those whose voices are now hushed in the grave. Again are immense crowds of people wholesome? Are there always vigor and force and efficiency in numbers, unless there is exact unity? In such promiscuous multitudes as crowd the cottages and the strand and as go in and out of tents and barracks coming as they do from all parts and representing as they do various grades of social life, there must be forces and influences that are constantly at work, and whether their influence is toward the better or worse side of human nature, it is hard to say. They are not all christian professors and they are all human. They are loosed from the restraints of home and are on a vacation for pleasure.

Ohio spends liberally in the support of her public schools. The total cost of education in the state for the year 1882, including a charge of six per cent interest on the permanent property in use, was $9,113,879, an increase of over the cost of 1881 of $877,167. The average cost per capita on the daily attendance was $15 93 and on the enrollment $10 25. The average cost per capita of the population of the state between the ages of 6 and 16 was $9 29 exclusive of the six per cent charge and including that charge it was $11 01. These figures show an increased expenditure over the preceding year in the average cost per capita of daily attendance in the townships of 5 per cent, in the cities, towns and special districts of 8 per cent, and in the state of 8 per cent.

It is asserted that the Indians are not a "perishing race." On the contrary, all recent statistics show their numbers to be slowly increasing. Those who have made special study of the subject think the increase is about 1000 a year. Not including Alaska the Indian population of the United States is now computed at 261,851, nearly all distributed among sixty-eight agencies. It is now believed that the old estimates of the Indian population of America upon the settlement of the continent by the whites were grossly in excess of the actual numbers. Recent writers express a doubt whether the Indian population of the territory now known as the United States was ever very much greater than it is now.

A law was passed by the legislature of Missouri forbidding foreign banking corporations to do business in the state under a penalty of $1000 for each day's business. Some months ago the Bank of Montreal with its capital and reserve of $18,000,000 sent agents to St. Louis with a view to establishing a branch in that city for the United States. But the statute was found to be in the way [illegible] branch [illegible] established in Chicago [illegible]

A New Political Party

A call bearing the signatures of representatives from eleven states has been issued for a national delegate conference at Chicago July 4 1883 for the purpose of organizing a political party to espouse the cause of legitimate industry in the irrepressible conflict already entered upon between the confederated monopolies and the people. All who favor the [illegible] of the power of corporations, the holding of the public lands for actual settlers, the suppression of gambling in the necessities of life, and of combinations which fix prices against the natural laws of trade, the destruction of legal rights in vested wrongs and the overthrow of all monopolies and of all systems and laws made in the interest of the few against the many, all who oppose the control of the currency by [illegible] the taxation of all industry for the benefit of favored enterprise under the name of a protective tariff, all who favor the election of the president vice president and United States senators by a direct vote of the people, all who favor simple and just government and [illegible] and corrupt, are invited to choose delegates to represent them in conference, the basis of representation being four delegates for the District of Columbia and four for each congressional district of the United States. Believing that a crisis [illegible] is approaching, not alone in our national affairs but in civilization itself, appeal is made to the freemen of America to [illegible] themselves and to stand [illegible] their fathers have stood before for the rights of man and the dignity of human nature.

The Man with an Income and Nothing to Do.

A man who has nothing to do is a pitiable object says Burdette. He is simply a dead man. He is living on charity. Some man allows [illegible] now dead has left him the money that he lives on and all he has to do is to draw the money, eat drink and sleep. No man can live contentedly with happiness which he comes home because he only comes home when the other places are closed. He cannot come home tired and be petted and rested by willing hands, because it would be a mockery to pet a tired man who had got tired doing nothing. Such a man simply exists and is no good on earth. If he would wheel a barrow and earn a dollar and get tired and buy a beefsteak with the dollar and have it cooked and eat it while the appetite was on that he got wheeling the barrow, he would know more enjoyment than he had ever known before. That man with nothing to do on earth no doubt thinks as he lies around and smells flowers that he is enjoying life, but he knows no more about enjoyment than a tom cat that sleeps all day and goes out at night to play short stop to a lot of bootjacks and beer bottles. Such a man is a cipher and does not know enough to go in when it rains. If there were less incomes left to lazy young fellows and more sets of carpenter tools there would be more real enjoyment.

CITY.

[illegible] TO CHINESE.—The three-story brick lately constructed by Messrs [illegible] has on Second street between Oak and [illegible] has [illegible] to Chinamen for a term of five years at monthly rental of $340. The building is now being fitted up to suit the Chinese taste on the inside and will be fitted up by the Chinese to suit their own peculiar tastes. A gang of Chinese carpenters were at work yesterday [illegible] and dividing it into [illegible] the lower story and the base [illegible] which seem the best [illegible] for Chinamen. One of the stores [illegible] to be occupied by a store [illegible] by a dealer in merchandise. The [illegible] at present are used as barracks. Hundreds [illegible] placed side by side along the walls [illegible] building, while the personal effects [illegible] of the occupants are stacked up in front [illegible] of this building by Chinese [illegible] virtually gives up to them the [illegible] adjacent property owner states that he [illegible] $60 per month toward the rent [illegible] for white tenants [illegible] building for white tenants. [illegible] IN TROUBLE.—In the trial of two [illegible] Sitka in the U. District Attorney [illegible] in possession of information that [illegible] had been brewing without a license and also [illegible] that he was in the city having come [illegible] business, caused his arrest. It was [illegible] by the occurrence and it was stated that he [illegible] by Major Berry that as no license [illegible] could be obtained at Sitka there [illegible] would be all right to brew without a license [illegible] has been convinced of the fallacy of this [illegible] and will appear in court for sentence. It [illegible] from the fact that brewers think it [illegible] to have a license to brew nor saloon [illegible] to have a license in Sitka, that the residents of [illegible] do not have a realizing sense of the [illegible] of the United States law, but District [illegible] seems bound to enlighten them.

It is supposed to have been [illegible] when the family were out in the [illegible] had obstructed the view of the [illegible] of the robber, and it is [illegible] no person was aware of the place [illegible] was secreted. Mrs Stock was in [illegible] and placed the matter before the [illegible] something might be done to [illegible] the guilty person, but with no clue to [illegible] is but little hope of any result. The [illegible] is a severe blow to the poor people [illegible] and saved in hope of purchasing [illegible].

[illegible] BASE.—The Star base[illegible] a meeting at Justice Greene's [illegible] to reorganize for the com[illegible]. There will be but little change in the [illegible] and it is thought that it will [illegible] before. The Stars have held [illegible] against all comers without [illegible] and have in that time played [illegible]. There is a movement [illegible] club here for the special [illegible] with the Stars for the cham[illegible] Walla Walla ball tossers, [illegible] endeavoring to draw to them [illegible] a nine which will make [illegible] boys. SANITARY REFORM.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

Your very valuable article in Tuesday's paper on this urgent matter, leads me to inquire whether or not the city council have the power under their charter to make laws regulating the removal of fecal and other offensive matter and to enforce the same by fire or other punishment for non compliance, and, further to inquire if they have the power why they do not exercise it by causing all cess pools within the city limits to be emptied periodically between certain hours of the night and by means of carts made for the purpose to a regulation pattern, as is done in other cities?

It is to be hoped that now you have started the subject it will not be allowed to drop until a thorough reform takes place, one feature of which should be the establishment of a properly constituted board of health invested with sufficient power to enforce its regulations.

Probably one half of our present ill-ness arises from the violation of common sanitary laws and there is hardly another subject to be found of such vital importance to the community as that of sanitary drainage.

Permit me in fine to [illegible] call the attention of any whose interest may have been aroused in regard to this matter to a work now lying before me and which may be obtained at the Portland library, by George E. Waring, Jr, entitled "The Sanitary Drainage of Houses and Towns," in which will be found many valuable suggestions. W.

At a meeting of the hotel keepers of Portland March 6th at the Mariners' Home R. S. Stubbs was chosen chairman and H. M. Taylor secretary. The object of the meeting was to show that at the great cost of all kinds of produce it was necessary to raise prices of board. It was unanimously agreed to raise board to $4 50 per week and single meals 25¢. Transient travel $1 to $1 50 per day according to room. The change in price to take effect March 17, 1883. The secretary, H. M. Taylor was ordered to give due notice of this change in the daily papers and to procure a card of rates to post in the office of each of the hotels. An effort was made by Mr. I. B. Gleason as one of the prisoner residing in Portland to have him released on a writ of habeas corpus but yielded to better counsel as such a proceeding would only have retarded the prisoner's examination, without helping his case. Though he could have been legally released by such process he would certainly have been re-arrested and his examination continued from day to day until evidence necessary to hold him arrived from California. It is the opinion of competent authorities that the prisoner is guilty of a technical breach of the law but not of a moral crime and in view of this fact his attorneys here Messrs Harrington & Burney, will endeavor to effect a compromise. In extenuation of the prisoner's case it may be mentioned that his sister residing in this city is dependent upon him for support a case now pending for divorce from her husband on account of cruel and inhuman treatment.

THURSDAY MORNING, MARCH 8, 1883.

SCANDAL.

A woman to the holy father went
Confession of sin was her intent,
And so her misdemeanors, great and small,
She faithfully rehearsed them all,
And, chiefest in her catalogue of sin,
She owned that she a talebearer had been
And borne a bit of scandal up and down
To all the long-tongued gossips in the town.
The holy father for her other sin
Granted the absolution asked of him;
But while for all the rest he pardon gave
He told her this offense was very grave,
And that to do fit penance she must go
Out by the wayside where the thistles grow
And gather the largest, ripest one,
Scatter its seeds, and that when this was done,
She must come back again another day
To tell him his commands she did obey.
The woman, thinking this a penance light,
Hastened to do his will that very night,
Feeling right glad she had escaped so well.
Next day but one she went the priest to tell,
The priest sat still and heard her story through,
Then said, "There's something still for you to do:
Those little thistle seeds which you have sown,
I bid you go regather every one."
The woman said, "But, father, 'twould be in vain
To try to gather up those seeds again;
The winds have scattered them both far and wide
Over the meadowed vale and mountain side."
The father answered, "Now, I hope from this
The lesson I have taught you will not miss,
You cannot gather back the scattered seeds,
Which far and wide will grow to noxious weeds
Nor can the mischief once by scandal sown
By any penance be again undone."

AN OBLIGING FRIEND.

I had a friend named Jack, the same as Offenbach, only that he was not a musician; without that he had every fault. How he became my friend is easily explained. We were boys together. In my day children were children, playing at ball and spinning tops, and not little men discussing finance or the coming of Patti. Whether this was desirable, or whether the children of those days were any better than the children of the present day, matters little to my story. One day another boy struck Jack. Jack was small and weak, and perhaps rather cowardly; he defended himself, but feebly. I arrived and delivered Jack from his assailant, but not without losing a bit of my trousers in the fight, the loss of which caused me to receive a long lecture in the evening on the folly of my ways. Every one knows that a little boy who leaves fragments of his pantaloons along the wayside will one of these days bring up on the gallows.

Jack said to me: "You saved my life yesterday." I cannot tell you how my heart swelled with pride at my ten years of age to have saved the life of a brother playfellow. When I say brother it is rather a figure of speech, for Jack was small, homely and most unkempt. But no matter, according to the scriptures he was my brother. From the eventful day when I saved his life Jack became my intimate friend. It occasioned not a little remark in my native town that the son of such parents as mine should associate with the shoemaker's child, but my mother always replied with much spirit:

"My son is not proud."

Jack, my friend Jack, thus became my messmate at home, and whenever strangers asked who the children was they were told that it was the little fellow whose life Antoine had saved, and I thus acquired much importance in the eyes of our friends.

From this time, I may as well acknowledge it, I became Jack's victim. At boarding school I was always obliged to defend him, and, as his temper was violent, I was the recipient of many hard blows from fists and caps; but it could not be avoided, as it was not possible to allow my "protege" to be beaten. Jack was constantly in need of pens, papers or pencils, and I was forced to deny myself that I might provide all he asked; for one does not save the life of a brother to see him humiliated before his comrades. On leaving school I lost sight of Jack. This was the happiest period of my whole life; but it was not to be of long duration.

One day, as deep in thought, I was walking up and down my little chamber in the Rue St. Jacques, some one knocked. I opened the door and recognized Jack, whom I had not seen for eight years. Truly, had it been any one but Jack my reception would not have been a cordial one, for in my position of poet any intercourse with a clerk engaged in trade would have been out of the question, but Jack was my portege.

"My dear old friend," said he, "I have come to you to save my life a second time."

"What can I do for you?" I asked.

"Ah! a very simple thing. Divide with me as formerly. I am without employment and I thought—"

"You are quite right," said I to him; "I am in sad circumstances, but where there is enough for one there is enough for two, my dear Jack, so let us breakfast." Jack ate all my breakfast but he paid me well.

"You see, Antoine," said he, when he had devoured everything, "I am but a poor devil, not worth my salt. I have neither your genius nor your knowledge, but you know I would throw myself into the fire for you."

Such humility and devotion deeply affected me and I replied, "My dear Jack, true friendship is the wealth of the poor."

This state of things lasted for eighteen months, Jack saying to me repeatedly: "You know, Antoine, that I would throw myself into the fire for you," and in such accents that I was always touched.

One evening the landlord, Millot—a good man, but there is times when one is out of conceit with all the world—said to me:

"Mr. Antoine, you are an honest fellow, but I cannot always lodge you for nothing. I do not wish to retain any of your effects, but you must find a room elsewhere; you will pay me when you can." "I will pay you sooner or later," I said; and he replied, "I am sure of that."

I could have embraced him. The good old man! Had I only a pen of Byron or of our great poet, Lamartine, to render his name famous in recognition of his great soul. Very few landlords would have acted so nobly. The next day I packed my bundles and waited for Jack. It was my intention to ask him to assist me to remove our goods, but Jack did not make his appearance. I moved alone, and most sorrowfully.

For more than a year I sought the inspiration of the muse in the Rue Clovis, when one Sunday I spied Jack, evidently gotten up for a holiday. Everything about him was strikingly new, and his boots shone like the sun. I dared not accost him, but he came to me.

"I know that I was an expense to you," said he, "and so went away."

"I was very unhappy about it," I replied; "why not have told me you were going?"

"You would have wished me not to leave you, and I could not live at your expense any longer."

"I do not understand your feelings."

"I felt, you see, that I who would throw myself into the fire for you could not always deprive you of half your daily bread. Good-bye, Antoine, I will see you soon."

"Dear old Jack," I cried to myself, "what a noble heart!"

One day the editor of the Forban paid me 17 francs, and I was walking the streets with a light heart.

"Why, Jack, dear old fellow," I cried to myself, "Why did you leave me? Where are you, now that fortune smiles upon me and glory knocks at my door?"

"Good day, Antoine," said a timid voice.

It was Jack, but with such a woe-begone appearance! His overcoat had but two buttons remaining; perhaps, even, it was the two buttons that had no overcoat.

"Where do you come from, my poor fellow?" I cried, taking both his hands in mine.

"I don't know, and I am going back," replied Jack. "The 'Siege de Bagdad' has failed, and I am homeless again."

"Come with me."

"I will accept, my dear Antoine, and without hesitation, because you know I would throw myself into the fire for you."

Jack stayed with me for some months. One morning I said to him:

"My poor friend, fate is against us. You were engrossed in the trade of new goods, and I in the old; the Forban like the 'Siege de Bagdad,' was unsuccessful. We are sorely pressed."

By evening Jack had disappeared. He was so sensitive he did not wish to remain longer at my expense. This time, alas! real misery came nearer than ever before. The journals wished for known writers only, and to be known one had to make one's self known. What was to become of me? As I was pondering this dreadful question I heard some one ridiculing my personal appearance because, I must admit it, I was so shabbily dressed. Looking round I recognized Jack with two or three other young men.

"Is it you, Antoine?" he cried. "What has befallen you?"

I confess I was about to say some very hard things to him, when he cried out:

"Gentlemen, he who stands before you will be a great man one of these days, mark well my words. Let me introduce a friend who saved my life when we were children, and who has been a good comrade since we have grown up; he will dine with us."

"Thanks," I replied, "I have dined."

This was very near the truth, as I had taken all the dinner I was accustomed to of late. Jack took me by the arm and allowed his friends to pass on.

"Come with us," said he.

"No, I am no subject for ridicule."

"Listen, dear friend. I have been employed by the 'Ville de Carcassonne' for two months now. I have not laid up anything as yet, but in another month I shall come to see you, and then—"

"You owe me nothing."

"I owe everything to you. But that does not weigh upon me, for you know, my good Antoine, I would throw myself into the fire for you."

I had no dinner, but I returned home with a joyful heart; it is so delightful to meet with such gratitude.

Nevertheless, Jack did not come. I did [illegible] [illegible] to say [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and none of his companions knew of his whereabouts. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] along the Champs Elysees. It was Jack.

"Is that you, Jack?"

"Yes, my friend, the 'Ville de Carcassonne' failed, and I was afterwards with the [illegible] [illegible], but that has also [illegible]."

"But [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. When [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] it seems to follow him everywhere [illegible] [illegible] more [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]." I took Jack home with me.

"It is destiny that you should always save my life," said Jack.

"Would you not do the same for me?"

"Most surely, I would throw myself into the fire for you."

My situation at this time was somewhat improved, as I had accomplished some work for a bookseller, and an old sharper of the "Place de la Bourse" engaged me to write some verses for an unknown party, paying me one sou and selling them for ten, to the satisfaction of everybody. Jack could have assisted me somewhat, as my verses at that time must have been atrocious but when I alluded in any way to such a desire he would say:

"I would throw myself into the fire for you, dear Antoine, you know, but do not ever ask me to find a rhyme for you." One day I said to him: "My good Jack, I have worked all night on these papers, will you carry them to the printing office for me?"

He replied: "My dear Antoine, you know that I would throw myself into the fire for you, but notwithstanding my desire to be useful, I cannot act as your servant."

This was just; he was quite right. I went to the office myself. The old sharper of the "Place de la Bourse" died at this time and the bookseller failed. Jack, who, as I have already said, was so very delicate in feeling, again disappeared. One morning I found him smoking a cigar at the door of a mercer's shop.

"What are you doing here, Jack?" I inquired.

"This is my home," he replied.

"What do you say?"

"I have married the mistress of the shop."

"Mlle. Minette?"

"The same."

I could not help smiling.

"I know why you smile," cried Jack.

"You mistake me."

"No, I do not. But there is mercy for all sins."

"Are you happy?"

"Yes, business is very good."

"I wish I could say as much."

"My good Antoine," said he, "you know I would throw myself into the fire for you, but you understand that it would be impossible for me to have you here."

He was right. Besides, I must own that I should have been ill at ease with poor Minette. This little shop woman was anything but happy. Jack soon squandered all of her money, and she was obliged to go back to work in the city again.

"My wife was a jade," said Jack, "and I have left her. I wish to live alone hereafter, and I'm going into business."

While waiting for said business Jack lived with me as formerly. I did not feel satisfied with the arrangement, but he was always saying:

"My dear, good Antoine, what should I have done without you? What would have become of me? As a child you fought my battles, as a young man you shelter me under your roof; your table is mine and your fireside is my refuge; but I am not ungrateful; believe me, I would throw myself into the fire for you."

"Very good," said I one day, "just do me the favor of taking this letter at once to the editor of Etoile du Soir; he offered me a situation as reporter, which I have long desired, and he wishes an immediate reply."

"I will fly with it," cried Jack with enthusiasm.

I dressed myself with care and then hastened to the Odeon, where there was to be a first representation of a great play. During one of the entr'actes I saw the editor among the crowd, and I made my way to him in order to express my thanks. "You have nothing to thank me for," said he in the coolest manner. "I asked you for an immediate response and you did not respond; so much the worse for yourself, as I have now given the position to Isadore Grattesel." I turned away utterly crushed.

On entering the house I saw Jack eating plums in the room of our neighbor, M——e, Moreau, and at the same time making a speech to the assembled company.

"Why did you not carry my letter?" I cried, breaking in upon him.

"Friend Antoine," said he trembling, "I am a man capable of the greatest devotion, but I am not an errand boy. Ask me to throw myself into the fire for you and I will do it, but never ask me to carry a letter."

I wanted to kill him on the spot; but I controlled myself, for that would have been a sin; but who has not sinned at least once in his lifetime.

"Friend Jack," said I, "leave me and go where you please. I want a friend, and as I rarely fall into the fire I have no need of a fireman."—Boston Journal.

AFTERNOON DISPATCHES.

Desperate Prize Fight.

NEW YORK, March 7.—The most desperate prize fight ever witnessed took place in the basement of Matt Grace's bowery sporting house. The principals were Geo. Fulljames, a light weight champion, and Pat Gallagher, a noted pugilist of Philadelphia. The men wore light gloves—were mere apologies for gloves—to evade the law. The battle was for $500 and the light weight championship. Fourteen rounds were fought in twenty-five minutes. The championship and money was awarded Fulljames, as at the end of the fourteenth round Gallagher failed to come to time. Both men were terribly punished. In the middle of the fight a cry of "police" was raised but it proved a false alarm and the men returned to the ring and finished the fight. Over 5000 persons were present. Philadelphia sent a strong delegation and this city was well represented. The fight was within a stone's throw of the police headquarters, but no arrests were made.

Another Account.

NEW YORK, March 7.—The World thus describes the last round of the prize fight: Fulljames was the stronger of the two, and as opportunity offered, he took the advantage to throw Gallagher off his head, completely winding him up. The round lasted a minute, when the men retired to their trainers. A man in the crowd cried out "police," and a scramble for the door followed. It proved a false alarm, and when quiet was restored it was found that Gallagher had taken his departure. Fulljames, who had not left the ring, claimed the night, which the referee awarded him.

Ryan Wants to Fight.

NEW YORK, March 7.—The Sun says Paddy Ryan in a letter to Jack Shiles of this city, says he would like another chance to face Sullivan in the ring. He says he was never better in his life, and his friends in Chicago would raise $2000 provided Shiles can raise $3000 more in New York, so the stakes may be $10,000. Ryan feels that Sullivan can't whip him.

Steamer Libeled.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 6.—George W. Gove and Thomas G. Wilson, merchants at Seattle, filed a libel to-day in the United States district court against the American bark Corea for $4,945.48, claiming that owing to improper and negligent stowing of cargo, oats shipped by them to this port were badly damaged.

After Immigrants.

The Immigrant Association has decided to send two agents abroad, one to Europe and the other to the eastern states for the purpose of forming colonies for the settlement of the state. Paul Ocker, for some time connected with the association, will go to Europe and devote his energies in Germany, Switzerland and Austria. Dr. N. Hohn has been assigned to duty in the east.

Made an Assignment.

BALTIMORE, March 7.—The firm of Malster & Reany, ship builders, machinists and operators of the dry dock at Locust point, have assigned; liabilities $30,000. Provision is made for payment first of their several hundred workmen.

His Death Warrant.

HARRISBURG, March 7.—The death warrant of Ward McConkey, of Pittsburg, has been signed, and May 10th is the day fixed for the execution.

The legislative assembly of the state of Oregon at its last session in 1882 passed a number of enactments which materially concern the welfare of our city. The principal provisions of these enactments were the extension of the boundary of the city and the creation of a board of fire commissioners with authority to organize a paid fire department. The change from volunteer to paid service in the fire department will necessitate heavier expenditures in that department than heretofore, especially during the first year, the board of fire commissioners having made its requisition upon the council for the sum of $55,000 as their estimated expenditure for 1883.

The additional cost of the paid fire department, together with the cost of operating the city dredger, which is estimated at $15,000, the increased cost of an enlarged police force and the necessary expense incident to the conduct and management of the business of a rapidly growing city such as Portland now is and will be during the coming year, render it necessary to provide a fund somewhat in excess of that of the year 1882, and yet the enlarged area comprised in the new boundary lines of the city will so swell the valuation of property as to make it possible with proper economy to levy a smaller per centum of tax than that of the previous year, which was 1 per centum. It is estimated that a tax of 9 mills per centum in the aggregate will be amply sufficient to meet the expenses of conducting the city government for the year 1883 in all its departments.

ASSESSMENT OF PROPERTY.

An amendment to the city charter passed in the year 1880, abolished the office of city assessor and provided that the auditor should make out a list of the taxable property of the city from the assessment roll of Multnomah county each year, on or before the first day of December.

Practically under this law the assessment roll of the county has been literally copied, including the valuations made by the county assessor, and while it may seem to commend itself as a measure of economy, yet the practice is found inconvenient and there is, doubtless, a very large amount of property in the city which escapes taxation for want of an assessor to attend to the matter.

The duties of the auditor are such that neither he nor his deputy can attend even to the preparation of the assessment roll under the existing law from the county assessor's list, but less keep account of conveyances of property made after the county roll is made out, and add such property as may be omitted from the county assessment or which may be brought into the city subsequently to the sitting of the county board of equalization, which usually concludes its labors in the month of August.

Besides, under the present [illegible] the valuation of property for the city [illegible] of the year 1882, was made by the county assessor [illegible] the months of June and July of the year 1882, whereas a matter of fact a great part of the real property in the city has advanced in value from 25 to [illegible] per cent since that time which makes tax [illegible] [illegible] higher than is actually the case.

Under the school law as amended at the last session of the legislature, the boundaries of school district No. 1, in Multnomah county, are identical with those of the city of Portland. The city and school district having the same territorial boundary might in point of economy well afford to employ and pay a competent man to assess the property within their limits, but to effect this will require legislative enactment, but the council should in my opinion see that this matter is properly brought to the attention of the next legislature, as the present system is defective, and much more is lost to the city through the operation than is saved by being relieved from the payment of a salary to a competent man as assessor.

STREETS AND THEIR IMPROVEMENT.

There has been a large amount of street improvement made in the city during the year 1882, although the expense incurred for street improvement in 1881 exceeded that of 1882 by $[illegible] 14.

The incessant rains in winter and character of the soil and climate of Portland render it very difficult to adopt a system for the improvement of our streets which will give satisfaction.

The stone block pavement, when placed upon a proper rock foundation, seems to answer all the requirements of the heavy teaming done on the business streets, but it is too expensive, and the noise occasioned by driving teams over the same at a rapid rate is too great to admit this improvement in that part of the city occupied as residence property.

Wood not only decays rapidly in our damp climate, but is more subject to wear under the same climatic influences than if the same were kept dry, and hence neither planked nor Nicholson paved streets have proven satisfactory.

The style of macadam now in use falls far short of being a satisfactory improvement. It needs no experiment to demonstrate that finely crushed or powdered rock spread upon our streets as a top dressing, when thoroughly wetted as it is by the rains of winter, will under the crushing and triturating influence of wagon tires and horses' hoofs, very soon be reduced to a fine powder, which becomes the most disagreeable slush in wet weather and insufferable dust during the dry season. The great want seems to be a top dressing which will not grind into sand and dust too rapidly.

If washed river gravel was screened through meshes of not over three quarters of an inch in diameter and spread evenly over the surface of the broken rock as now laid, and then thoroughly packed by rolling, as the rock dressing now are, it seems to me it would present a surface that would stand the wear well, and at the same time make a smooth street. This would also prevent monopolies by enabling any one to compete for the work, whereas under the present style of macadam only those fortunate enough to own or control a rock-crusher can enter the field as contractors for street work of that character. I would call the attention of the council to the necessity of opening streets where county roads are now located within the city limits. The extension of the city limits effected by the new charter, which went into effect on the 22d day of January last, brings within the city a number of county roads which the county will now cease to work, and unless such roads be opened as streets there will be no authority found for their improvement within such limits. The condition of the macadam road and the canyon road especially calls for immediate action. I think streets should also be very generally laid out within the extended limits of the city soon, as the expense attending the same would be little or nothing, while if the matter is neglected until property becomes valuable, it will become a heavy drain upon the city treasury to open streets to localities where expensive buildings have been erected and lands laid off in large tracts on the lines of proposed streets.

PUBLIC PARK.

In my judgment steps should at once be taken looking to the improvement and beautifying of the park west of the city. A small sum spent this year in clearing out underbrush and [illegible] growth before the dry season comes would [illegible] [illegible] from forest fires, which may sweep over the park in its present condition during any summer or fall and cause irreparable damage.

PUBLIC LEVEE.

The public levee lying at the foot of Jefferson, Columbia and Clay streets, and covering [illegible] feet of river front, is a valuable piece of property, and yet the city has never derived any income therefrom, and in its present unimproved condition it is of little use to any one. A number of responsible parties can be found who will pay the city a reasonable rental for the property, keeping open a free landing place, with space sufficient to accommodate a greater number than those who now use the levee as a free landing place, and at the same time erect such improvements as shall be of greater value to the city at the expiration of the lease. I would advise the sale of the levee, [illegible] I think it should by all means be leased to some responsible parties, [illegible] which the city will derive an income therefrom.

POLICE DEPARTMENT.

The regular police force of the city now numbers twenty-[illegible] men, besides the chief and two captains.

For a city of the population and area of Portland, the police force is altogether too small in numbers, and it will be necessary to increase the force materially during the coming year, growing from the rapid[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the city's growth in population.

Before the close of the year Portland will be practically the terminus of one, and probably two, transcontinental lines of railway, and there is every reason to think there will be an increase of floating people to follow the completion of either of these lines. It will not do for us to be without ample force at hand, such a police force as shall be able to preserve that peace and quiet amongst us for which our city has always been noted.

IMPROVEMENT OF WILLAMETTE RIVER.

The importance of keeping an open river to the sea can not be over-estimated. Portland's future depends largely on her commercial relations with foreign countries, which can alone be maintained by providing for the safe and expeditious passage of sea going vessels to and from her marts.

A large sum has been expended by the city the past year in constructing a dredger intended for opening and keeping open a deeper channel from Fort and to the mouth of the Willamette river.

[illegible] [illegible] unfavorable weather and [illegible] circumstances frequently occurring, the dredger has not yet been a satisfactory [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the Willamette [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] that it shall [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

EAST PORTLAND AND WHARVES.

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] wharf or master [illegible] after [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

HEALTH.

The health of Portland has been [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the importance of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the proper authorities to adopt suitable quarantine regulations [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] entirely inadequate to [illegible].

There is no health officer at Astoria, and cases have occurred where contagious diseases have been introduced among us by persons afflicted therewith being permitted to pass Astoria in ships, and a vigilant surveillance should be kept at this place, to see that ships having on board persons with contagious diseases, such as smallpox, be not permitted to land except under proper quarantine.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

During the past year, as has already been stated, an important change has been effected both in the control and conduct of the fire department. Under a law which I have appointed to the office of fire commissioners James Lotan, Henry Ackerman and Geo. L. Story, gentlemen of well known integrity and ability in such department, who will, I doubt not, manage the affairs of the paid fire department which they have organized to the pecuniary advantage and to the entire satisfaction of the citizens and taxpayers of the city. Under the law the board of fire commissioners are entirely independent of the mayor and council, excepting as to their appointment, and it is made the duty of the council to provide at the time the taxes are levied to create such a fund as the board of fire commissioners shall designate, which shall be subject to the order of such board.

SEWERS.

The heavy rains of this winter have demonstrated the fact beyond a doubt that the present sewage system is entirely inadequate. In fact there is a lamentable want of system thus far, and the demand is pressing and imperative for the adoption by the city of some general and comprehensive system of drainage and sewage for the entire precincts of the city.

In my judgment there should be several large sewers constructed of brick running the entire length of the city with branch terra-cotta pipe emptying all the drainage of the city at some point where it would not be dangerous to health. Those now in operation in many cases empty their contents on the bottom-lands along the river front, and the only wonder is that disease has not been generally engendered in the neighborhood where the filth is deposited.

In conclusion, let me say to you that the future of our city has never at any time since my long residence therein been brighter or more full of promise than now, and we may congratulate ourselves that, with the rapid growth of the municipality we have been chosen to serve will necessarily entail additional burdens upon its officers, yet the opportunity for doing a good office for our constituents is that much enlarged, and if we fulfill well the trust confided to us, our labors will not be unfruitful of grand results.

J. A. CHAPMAN, Mayor.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

WEDNESDAY, March 7.

Freights at San Francisco are weaker and latest dates show a slight decline in rate. With us there is no business.

To-day we hear of one small sale of wheat, for milling purposes, made in the interior on a basis of about $1 93 here. Millers continue to take up any offering. English markets to-day are very slow with Mark Lane easier. Chicago is easier, while New York is only steady. San Francisco reports a good demand with prices in favor of sellers.

No change in flour.

Oats firm and for choice a slight advance is occasionally had.

Potatoes in good movement at unchanged value. 700 sacks went to California per last steamer.

Green apples in demand with very choice scarce, and for them an advance can be had.

Eggs in large stock, but for fresh full price is asked. To get rid of some held yesterday a decline was submitted to.

Weather clear and warm, with light SE breeze.

Receipts of produce the past 24 hours have been 1275 bbls flour, 375 [illegible] millstuff, 50 sks potatoes, 30 bls hay, 416 lbs hides, 5950 doz eggs, 158 pkgs fruit from the valley and 159 bbls flour and 1735 lbs wool from the eastern section.

The steamship Columbia took out 629 sks potatoes, 101 bxs apples, 72 bxs dried do, 367 bxs dried fruit, 113 dry 253 green hides, 75 green 97 dry sheep pelts, 4 case tallow, 17 bls deerskins, 21 dry calf skins, 5 bls calfskins, 2 cs woolen goods, 131 cs canned fruit, 50 bxs fresh oysters, 91 sks [illegible] valley wool, 6 bls [illegible] E. O. wool, 7469 salmon and $9062 treasure.

NEW YORK FREIGHTS AND MARKETS.

NEW YORK, March 7.—The clipper freight market remains much the same as noted for the past few weeks, offerings being rough and heavy goods, of which ships have all they require, but they are delayed owing to want of lighter freight, of which there is but little offering at present. Vessels from the line are in a peculiar predicament. There are three of them on berth, one nearly loaded, and they all have large engagements of railroad iron, which must go forward by these vessels. The same line has also one thousand tons of coal on government account, which must also go forward at once. Thus it will be seen that these vessels have but a small amount of room left for other freight. Still, in the present state of the market and from the fact that the other line has a vessel in berth, there is ample room for all offerings. The Storm King is yet in berth, the storm of yesterday preventing her from finishing. Rates remain very firm, especially for dead weights. Tonnage is very limited and likely to remain so for some time. However, both lines are supplied for the time being, and will suffer no delay. With the enactment of the modified tariff and tax bill a better feeling is obtained in business circles. The new tariff, disappointing though it may be to many, who furnish a basis for future contracts and it is but reasonable to expect there will be a speedy restoration of confidence and a revival of activity in all branches of trade and industry. It may require some little time for manufacturers and merchants to adjust their business to the changed condition of things, but they will have something [illegible] [illegible] in the way of data wherein to base their calculations.

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] quiet. To buy small quantities only were available, holders being unwilling to favor speculation and preferring to retain the stocks in hand until the market assumes a more settled condition. [illegible] [illegible] has improved somewhat, the [illegible] being the [illegible] generally asked at the close.
